Please note: there are different requirements for Arts Organizations versus Arts Programs, noted in the eligibility section below.

If you are unsure how your organization is classified, please contact the PCA.

Appeals Process

PCA recognizes that errors may occur in the PCA application process. PCA is committed to acknowledging any errors and responding to rectify the effects of an error. The appeals process enables applicants to identify these errors and omissions and bring them to the attention of the PCA. Appeals may result in a change in the determination of eligibility or the PCA award amount if the applicant can satisfactorily document that an error or omission occurred through no fault of the applicant. Appeals are awarded only if the error or omission had a substantial effect on the PCA's evaluation of an application or its determination of an applicant's eligibility.

Appeals are not intended to provide the applicant with an opportunity to challenge the assessment of the application's status or viability. Disagreement with the judgment of the application review is not grounds for an appeal.

Applicants considering an appeal should contact the PCA Director of Arts Organizations & Arts programs for advice and guidance. The appeal must be made in writing to the PCA Deputy Executive Director within ten business days from the date of the notification of the award status from the PCA. Appeal letters should identify the error or omission and the effect such error had on the results of the PCA's application review process. If the appeal is supported, funds will be awarded only if they are available.
