The “traffic light” icon for each measure indicates how the current month's number compares to the 12-month average before the drug interdiction strategy was introduced in September 2018.

Yellow indicates the current month is within an acceptable range, red indicates an extraordinarily high month's number, and green indicates an extraordinarily low month's number.

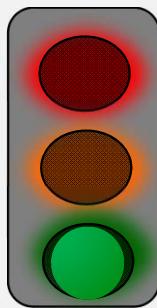

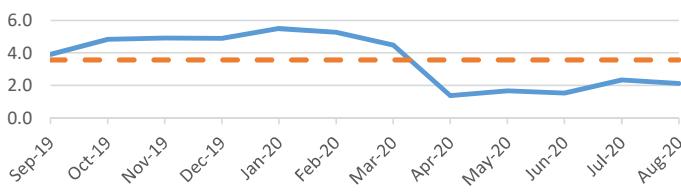

The “speedometer” icon for each measure indicates how the average of the measure during the total time after the September 2018 (when the drug interdiction changes were made) compares to the 12-month average before September 2018.

A needle in the yellow indicates an average in an acceptable range, a needle in the red indicates an extraordinarily high average, and a needle in the green indicates an extraordinarily low average.
