Increased Class Sizes for Emissions Recertification

An emissions bulletin was released in March 2016 advising emission stations that effective September 1, 2016, emission recertification exams will need to be taken within six months prior to expiration. There will be no extension provided beyond the expiration date on an inspector's emission credentials. Emission inspectors will need to retest prior to their credential expiring.

To assist emissions inspectors with this change, we ask Emissions Schools to consider expanding their class schedule. In addition, we are updating school contracts to allow for expanded class sizes and will no longer be limiting a recertification class to a maximum of 25 students. In advance of new contracts, and to ensure adequate classes, by way of this bulletin, we are allowing Emissions Schools at this time to expand their class size for emissions recertification to the size class that can be comfortably accommodated.
