

Read on to see if your at-home COVID-19 test kit expiration date has been extended:

1) Go to www.fda.gov “At-Home OTC COVID-19 Diagnostic Tests” website, to find the at-home test kit list near the bottom of the webpage.

- Find your test’s name, manufacturer (this is the company who made the test), expiration date, and lot number
- The lot number can be found next to the word LOT
- Be sure the manufacturer and test name match your test kit. Some manufacturers make more than one test

2) If your expiration date has been extended, you will see a link that says “Extended Expiration Date”

- Click the link and find your test kit’s lot number and new expiration date
- If your lot number is not listed, use the expiration date printed on the box

Or you can call the phone number listed on the test box to ask if it has expired
